

"It's the Americans!"

When the tides rise and fires ignite,
"It's the Americans!"—charging the fight.
Beaches are stormed, walls torn apart,
"It's the Americans!"—with grit at the start.

In frozen fields and jungles thick,
"It's the Americans!"—moving in quick.
When nations falter, lines collapse,
"It's the Americans!"—closing the gaps.

Bringing aid where others delay,
"It's the Americans!"—clearing the way.
From Berlin's airlift to Haiti's shore,
"It's the Americans!"—delivering more.

In deserts of sand or quakes below,
"It's the Americans!"—ready to go.
Bridges rebuilt, supplies in hand,
"It's the Americans!"—making a stand.

No waiting, no backing away,
"It's the Americans!"—seizing the day.
When silence falls, they answer the call,
"It's the Americans!"—standing for all.

Not just in might, but hope they bring,
"It's the Americans!"—under their wing.
So when the world turns and cries out for aid,
"It's the Americans!"—leading unafraid.
