

Like the locks on our doors, the military is often unnoticed until its necessity becomes undeniable. No one longs for conflict, just as no one wishes to need a lock, yet both provide peace of mind in a world where human nature is flawed. True security is not just about deterrence but about justice, and justice is not merely about punishment but restoration. Scripture reminds us that "righteousness and justice are the foundation of God's throne" (Psalm 89:14), showing that lasting peace is not secured by strength alone but by the transformation of hearts. As both history and faith reveal, security and justice carry a weight that is not just physical or political, but deeply moral and spiritual—requiring wisdom, compassion, and the courage to uphold what is right, even at a cost.
